

Kofi Asiedu Ofori

Mr. Ofori is a graduate of Boston University School of Law. He is presently a private practitioner in the District of Columbia. From 1997 to 1999, he was Director of Research for the Civil Rights Forum, an non-profit agency that advocates for the application of civil rights principles in the communication arena. During his tenure at the Civil Rights Forum, Mr. Ofori authored a study on discriminatory advertising practices, When Being No. 1 is Not Enough, on behalf of the Federal Communications Commission. During the previous nine years Mr. Ofori was chief lobbyist for the Office of Communication of the United Church of Christ. Areas of interest included broadcast media ownership concentration, minority tax certificates, market entry barriers for small and minority-owned businesses, the “digital divide,” broadcast program-content standards, petitions-to-deny license renewals, EEO, universal service, and interconnection standards for local exchange competition.

Mr. Ofori is the lead author of the book Blackout? Media Ownership Concentration and the Future of Black Radio. Mr. Ofori is a member of the District of Columbia Bar and has served as a board member of the Minority Media and Telecommunications Council.
